In a statement made on behalf of Lomas. Attorney Perkins. who was acting as public defender in place of State Senator Align L. Brown, who was in Hartford for the opening of the legislature, asked for a moderate jail sentence for Lomas. According to what the accused had told him, said Attorney Perkins. Lomas had married in 1916 at Cambridge, Mass., at that time being in the navy.
He had made a home for his wife, but she left him. He established a home again and lived with her and on one occasion overstayed his leave at her socasion overstayed his leave at her socasion overstayed his leave at her so-licitation and was tried as a deserter from the navy, serving a term at Rorts-mouth. Later he served for two years on the battleship Baltimore and when he had not seen his wife for the space of three years, he believed she did not want him to see her any more. When Lomas met the second girl in New London he considered that everything was broken off forever with his first wife and he mar-ried the second girl and subsequently went to New York, Major Hull said that he was forced to disagree with the public defender for he considered Lomas had committed a very serious offense. He had never supported his first wife, had deserted her and her child, and had likewise deserted his New London wife and her child. Lomas, said Mr. Hull, was an able-bodied man but don't like to work. The state attorney said he thought a substantial sentence ought to be given.

Judge Greene remarked that the court found it difficult, in view of such conflicting claims and not having heard the evidence, to pass judgment and sentence in the case. At the suggestion of Public Defender Perkins, the second woman whom Lomas married was called to the stand to testify.
